

innanē Runic: | ƿ ƿ ƿ ƿ | Pronunciation: /'in.nɑ.nɛ:/

adverb

Meanings

from inside, from within (ablative direction)

Etymology

From *in + *-anē. The development of the form of the word is uncertain. If the vowel *-a- was not part of the suffix itself, it could have been picked up from similar words, namely *ubanē, in which case the gemination had been introduced by analogy with *inn or *innai. If the original allative form of *inn were Pre-Germanic *en-no, then the ablative could have been built upon that, or as likely the locative *en-noy, which would explain the vowel and the gemination.

Descendants

*innanā (Proto-West Germanic)

innan (Old Saxon)

*innanā (Proto-West Germanic)

innan (Old English)

innen (Middle English)

*innanā (Proto-West Germanic)

innana (Old High German)

innen (Middle High German)

innen (German)

| ƿ ƿ ƿ ƿ | (inana) (Proto-Norse)

innan (Old Norse)

innan (Faroese)

innan (Icelandic)

innan (Norwegian Nynorsk)

| ʃ ʃ ʃ (inana) (Proto-Norse)

innan (Old Norse)

inden (Danish)

innen (Norwegian Bokmål)

| ʏ ʏ ʏ (inana) (Proto-Norse)

innan (Old Norse)

innan (Old Swedish)

innan (Swedish)

INNANA (innana) (Gothic)

View on Wiktionary.