Etymology

According to (Witzak 1991), from Proto-Indo-European sṛǵós* ('stork'), cognate to Sanskrit सृजय (sṛjaya) (sṛjaya, 'wading bird'), Ancient Greek πελαργός (pelargós) (pelargós, 'stork'), and Dacian βǣrzæ* (whence Romanian barză ('stork'), dialectal Bulgarian барзъ (barz).)

Alternately, from Proto-Indo-European *stṛgos, from *(s)terg-, *(s)terǵ- ('a type of bird'), possibly from Proto-Indo-European *(s)ter- ('stiff'). Cognate with Old East Slavic стѣркѣ (stīrkŭ, 'stork, crane'), Russian стерх (sterx, 'Siberian crane'), Ancient Greek τóργος (tórgos) (tórgos, 'vulture'), Albanian sterkjok ('stork') and possibly Old Armenian տառնել (taɾɛn, 'stork').
